Interferon alpha 2b is one of the most widely used drugs worldwide to treat patients infected with covid-19. This recombinant that counteracts viral diseases is of Cuban origin.

The drug was created on May 28, 1981 in Havana. A small team of researchers from the Cuban National Research Center and the Hematology Institute were the ones who made the first interferon from white blood cells, under the command of Commander Fidel Castro.

The technology to produce the Heberon Alfa R is incorporated into the joint venture. Already in 2007 the sanitary registration of the product in China was obtained and its marketing began in the Asian country.

Li Wenlan, executive director of the company, indicated that the Chinese National Health Commission "upon learning of the serious outbreak of the new coronavirus and the urgent need for the original interferon for the production of antiviral drugs, the Cuban side deferred its requests for importation. to China". In addition, they decided to designate a group of Cuban experts to provide aid to the Asian country.

Cuban President Miguel Díaz Canel has also highlighted the use of the Cuban drug interferon alfa 2B in the covid-19 confrontation. It is one of the 30 drugs chosen by the National Health Commission for its potential to cure respiratory conditions, and its selection is due to the effectiveness previously shown against viruses with characteristics similar to this one.

Interferon alpha 2b has already successfully cured more than 3,500 coronavirus patients. The scientific and commercial adviser to the president of Biocubafarma, Luis Herrera, stressed that this medicine "has the advantage that, in situations like these, it is a mechanism to protect yourself. Its use prevents patients with the possibility of aggravating and complicating themselves from reaching that state, and ultimately resulting in death. "

Countries such as Spain and Mexico have also used this drug for the treatment of coronavirus and asserted that treated patients respond positively to interferon.

The President of the Republic, Nicolás Maduro, reported that the Executive has received 10,000 units of interferon alfa 2B. "The Cuban interferon is already in Venezuela to attend to those patients who may have this issue later," he said.

The president added that "we need to shield the country, prepare it and also have enough medicines to care for the people who are affected." Likewise, he
